

MASTER OF ARTS IN PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND POLICY

The Master of Arts PMP is a master's degree in the field of public administration. Distinguished by its highly interdisciplinary character it is oriented towards the academic as well as the practical approach. The selection of the courses and the methods of teaching are both designed to meet those values.

The study programme is offered conjointly by the Universities of Bern, Lausanne and Lugano.

Interdisciplinary character

Studying in the field of public administration and eventually working in this area of expertise requires knowledge of various disciplines such as law, political sciences, economics, management, sociology and even computer science. This master programme offers an interdisciplinary education by involving lecturers from many different fields in the teaching of the same subject. Thereby, providing students with the methodological tools that permit an interdisciplinary analysis using relevant case studies and appropriate exercises.

Academic and professional orientation

The Master of Arts in Public Management and Policy has two ambitions: firstly, to train the future managers of Switzerland's public and semi-public sector as well as its non-profit organisations and secondly, to allow students to take a further step towards doctoral study programmes in corresponding fields.

Inclusion of national cultures

Switzerland's multilingual culture necessitates a multicultural approach to management in the public and semi-public sectors. This is reflected in the master programme by the inclusion of lecturers from three of the country's linguistic regions as well as by offering courses in all three regions.

Mobility

As the courses of the master programme can be attended in all three linguistic regions of Switzerland, student mobility is strongly encouraged.

Target audience

The Master of Arts PMP mainly addresses the holders of a Bachelor degree in economics, management, social studies and political science, communication or law. Holders of academic degrees in other fields can be admitted under conditions.
